Taste of the Orient at college

Students from Chichester College of Arts, Science and Technology gave some of the city's residents a taste of the Orient.

It happened when a visiting group from their sister college in Japan, Nagasaki Junior College, and trainees on college catering courses jointly produced an evening meal as a thank you to the families that hosted the Japanese students during their stay.

An extensive menu featured many traditional Japanese dishes, including Teriyaki beef, with sweet shoyu glaze and tempura.

The young women from Nagasaki, dressed in colourful kimonos, entertained their host families with traditional Japanese crafts, culminating in the ancient Japanese tea ceremony.

The event took place in the college's Options training restaurant, which was decorated with messages of welcome in Japanese, and traditional origami lucky cranes.

The group from Nagasaki, who studied on a two-week programme, made many friends during their stay, including residents at the Willows rest home, in Selsey, which they visited to give a taste of Japanese culture.
